PRIEST REFUSES TO OBEY BISHOP.

PARISHIONERS MAKE CHARGES

Dissension in East St. Louis Church May Be Aired in Court-Demonstration at Parochial Residence.

The Reverend Father Joseph Maszotas, who for the last two years has been rector of the East St. Louis Lithusnian Church, has been "silenced" by Bishop Janssen of Believille since July 1.

Father Maszotas refuses to obey the Bishop and also refuses to give up the parochial residence, insisting on performing his duties as pastor of the church. It may be necessary for the Bishop to take legal steps to oust the priest.

It was stated at Bishop Janssen's residence last night that it was thought that the priest would give up the parochial residence and that the matter would be amicably adjusted. A demnstration by members of the church unfriendly to Father Maszotas, and who desire him to leave, was made in front of his home Monday evening. There was considerable loud talking, and neighbors became frightened and summoned the

Some of the parishioners are determined and say that they will oust the priest if they have to force the doors of his residence and carry him out.

Refusal on the part of the priest to be transferred to another church because of dissatisfaction among his parishioners at the way the church was being conducted marked the beginning of the trouble between the priest and the Bishop. This was followed by the order of Bishop Janssen 'sliencing' the priest, but the latter refused to accept the order.

The Lithuanian Church is attended by the Poles and Lithuanians of East St. Louis. Almost all are, poor persons and are employed at the packing-houses at the National Stock Yards and other factories about East St. Louis.

The church is rot considered wealthy, and it is said that dissatisfaction first arese because Father Massotas falled to ollect as much money as was expected.

collect as much money as was expected. Other charges were made that he was not running the business affairs of the parish as they should be and that he was lax about attending to his parishloners.

These protests, at first verual, were later laid before Bishop Janssen in writing. Father Massotas was called before the Bishop, and after an extended investigation bishop Janssen came to the conclusion that he had better secure another priest for the church and so stop the internal dissension.

This fact was made known to Father Massotas and it is claimed that he instantly rebelled. He refused to be transferred.

On July 1 Bishop Janssen issued his edict "silencing" Father Maszotas. He also demanded possession of the church and the parochial residence. Father Maszotas isnored the order of Bishop Janssen.
Bishop Janssen, acording to other members of the clergy, has been lenient with the priest in that he has not forced him to abdicate. It is said to be the wish of Bishop Janssen to have Father Maszotas removed as quietly as possible and with being as query as possible and with the least amount of friction.

Sunday several members of the congregation learned that Father Maszotas had been "silenced." but that he persisted in attending to his priestly duties. The news quickly spread and the demonstration of Monday night occurred. Last evening there was another demonstration, but it was not as large as the previous one.

The Abbe said that he came as an Ambassador from an Old World Power to the first nation of the earth.
He pointed out that the world in general had much to leath from the United States, and that France in part cu ar needed to have the gospel of American liberty preached to her and exemplified in her life.

As a proof of this, he remarked upon the religious persecutions in France, and attributed the unhappiness of France to the fact that it was a Republic whose people did not have a true conception of people did not have a true conception of liberty.

"For this purpose I come to see and study a people who stand before the world as the exponents of a real republican government, founded on a right conception of the agreement of law and liberty."
